Last Week: Classification Speeches

New members in Dickinson Rotary are asked to introduce themselves to the Club through a short speech. These are called Classification Speeches because each member is classified according to the profession or industry in which they serve.

Taylor Belk is a construction manager for Roers Construction West. He was born in Minneapolis, Minnesota, and grew up in Coon Rapids. He is the oldest of four children having twin sisters and a younger brother. Basketball was his favorite sport.

Belk has a BS in Construction Engineering from NDSU where he did internships in Denver and as an assistant project manager in Los Angeles. He chose to return to the upper Midwest, and took the opportunity to live and work in Dickinson, because his family is spread across Minnesota, North Dakota, and South Dakota. He appreciates the strong family values in this region, and he also loves hunting and has friends in Dickinson.

Belk joined Rotary because he has uncles who have been Rotarians and he believes in giving back. He has been a member for five months, and he loves to see how the club gives back to the community as a group. He is also a member of the Dickinson Area Home Builders and Ducks Unlimited.

Amy Kreidt, a native of northern Minnesota, is the Administrator at Sanford Health Dickinson Clinic. Growing up in a small school with less than 100 students in her class, Amy was active in sports. After getting her Mrs. (yes, pronounced misiz) degree at UND she attended St. Cloud State, received a nursing degree at Bismarck State, and two bachelor's degrees from Dickinson State University. She spent twelve years working in labor and delivery as well as home health at St. Joseph's Hospital before joining the Sanford Health nursing staff.

Kreidt and her husband Tim, the athletic trainer at DSU, have three children ages 13, 10 and 9. Anna, their youngest, is a seven-year cancer survivor. They live north of town on the place they purchased from Jim and Sonja Ozbun. Jim is her sponsor in Rotary. They have highland cattle and some chickens.

Amy enjoys Rotary and is also active in Relay for Life, Make-A-Wish, and the American Cancer Society.
